

The Magazine in America

1741-1990

JOHN TEBBEL

MARY ELLEN ZUCKERMAN

The Magazine in America

1741–1990

John Tebbel

Mary Ellen Zuckerman

New York Oxford
OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
1991

Contents

Part I The Creation of Magazine Audiences (1741–1865)

1. Publishing for Elites: The First Magazines and Their Audiences, 3
2. Rise of the General Magazines, 8
3. The Magazine as a Political and Cultural Influence, 14
4. Magazines for Ladies, 27
5. The Beginnings of Black Magazines, 39
6. Magazine Publishing in the Civil War, 47

Part II The First Great Change (1865–1918)

7. New Audiences, New Editors, New Magazines, 57
8. The Magazine as a Reflection of National Life, 73
9. Periodicals for Women: A New Phase, 89
10. Magazines as Political Weapons in the Class Struggle, 108
11. Black Periodicals Between Two Wars, 131
12. Advertising and Circulation: The Establishing of a Magazine Business, 140

Part III Developing New Audiences (1919–1945)

13. The Fall and Rise of Empires, 149
14. Henry Luce and the Growth of an Information Press, 158
15. Developing the Mass Market, 175
16. Intellectual Currents in the Magazines, 199
17. Photojournalism: A New Breed, 227

Part IV Magazines Since the Second World War

18. The Transformation of an Industry, 243
19. Changing Concepts in Women's Magazines, 266
20. Developing Male Audiences, 282
21. The Way We Live: Magazines Reflecting American Life, 294
22. Postwar Intellectual—and Other—Currents, 304
23. Alternative Magazines, 327
24. Pulp and Science Fiction, 340
25. The Triumph of the Business Press, 346
26. Designing and Marketing the Modern Magazine, 358
27. New Horizons, 371

Bibliography, 383

Index, 399